“Colors of the Well-Tempered Clavier” Book I

Complete Book I – 24 Preludes & Fugues

Transcriptions for various instruments of the

Well-Tempered Clavier by Jan Leontsky.

By using a different sound (instrument) for each voice of Bach’s fugues, these transcriptions allow the auditor to follow their development and therefore to better understand the sometimes so complex contrapuntal structure of these Fugues of the Well-Tempered Clavier (*). This is almost impossible if these fugues are played on a single keyboard (harpsichord or piano), because of its unique sound envelop (). Besides, the challenge was to “orchestrate” – always following the original score – all the preludes for several instruments too. For example, for a three-voices fugue, the prelude and the fugue are both transcribed for three instruments. The term “colors” refers to, first, the sound effect of these new “orchestrations” of the Well-Tempered Clavier, then, the use of different tonalities which also change the color of each musical piece.

Leontsky

(*) I humbly tried to do the same transcription work for the Art of the Fugue BWV 1080.

() On that crucial point, see my essay : “Le problème Gould” (in French) : https://www.amazon.fr/dp/B09NRDSMYS
